

A photograph showing the underside of a metal bridge. The structure consists of several large, dark steel beams and a series of lighter-colored, corrugated metal plates. The entire structure is heavily corroded with rust, particularly along the edges and joints. A date stamp in orange text is located in the lower right corner. In the background, some green foliage and a white structure are visible.

09/15/2020