VERMONT, "the Green Mountain State," is traversed throughout her entire length by hills and mountains of unparalleled beauty.—not barren rock masses to awe and repel, but covered with verdure to their very top, lovely and alluring, enticing one on and on to ever-changing and never-ending scenes of enchantment. Their ramifications extend to every nook and cranny of the state, and in and out among them run hundreds of miles of improved roads.

Usually in the valleys, following the clear, swift, rocky streams, but frequently climbing by easy stages to lofty heights with distant views unfolding, or again through narrow mysterious mountain passes, these roads wind on and amid a labyrinth of infinite and unending beauty. Quaint Colonial farmhouses with old-fashioned flower gardens are reminiscent of the days of the Green Mountain Boys, and historical monuments recall Vermont's heroic past. Lovely lakes nestle here and there, some large, some small, often reflecting virgin spruces, always sparkling clear. Champlain, the largest of them all, may be skirted for a hundred miles, Adirondacks in the background and Green Mountains ever near at hand.

The mightiest ranges run north and south throughout the center of the state. Here is found Mt. Mansfield, highest of them all, and Killington, Stratton, Tabor, Bread Loaf, Camels Hump, Jay Peak and a host of others—all connected by "The Long Trail" of the Green Mountain Club, a footpath through the wilderness, three hundred miles long, but only an hour's hike from civilization on either side. Not all the great peaks are in the central ridges. Others rise with equal impressiveness even to the very borders of the state—the Taconics on the west, Mt. Ascutney, Burke Mountain and others close to the Connecticut on the east.

Situated midway between the Berkshires on the south, the Montreal and Quebec region on the north, the White Mountains and Maine on the east, the Adirondacks and the Thousand Island region on the west, Vermont is the geographical center of the greatest resort regions of the East, and is easily reached over splendid trunk line highways from any direction.

All of the routes featured on this map are graded and improved, the heaviest traveled roads being hard surfaced, largely concrete.

Vermont in percentage of purchased cattle. Vermont makes more than half the maple sugar produced in the United States and leads all other states in the production of maple syrup.

For many years Vermont has ranked near the head of the list in yield per acre of staple crops, largely exceeding the average yield for the United States, and it is famous for its high-grade apples and potatoes. Vermont ranks first in the production of marble and monumental granite, and second in the production of slate and talc. With approximately 100 varieties, Vermont produces nearly one-half the marble quarried in the United States and supplies nearly 70 percent of the monumental and statuary marble. This state furnishes approximately one-half of the monumental granite used in this country.

Vermont is served by some of the largest railroad systems of the United States and Canada. A network of bus lines traverses the State.

Information Bureaus are maintained by the State and by local civic and commercial organizations. The former gladly supplies maps and illustrated booklets on request, and all are prepared to answer specific inquiries for information.

Vermont and Vacation

are closely associated in the minds of a steadily increasing number of summer home-seekers and tourists.

Through the center of Vermont, from the northern to the southern border, extends the Green Mountain range, containing approximately one thousand peaks that equal or exceed two thousand feet in height. Vermont contains hundreds of lakes, from Champlain on its western border, more than one hundred miles in length, to pools, hidden in the hills, that reflect their charming mountain settings.

Vermont contains good hotels, large and small, that serve the farm, dairy and maple products that have made the state famous. There are, in this state, abundant opportunities for the location of camps and summer homes, within a day's automobile ride of the great cities of the East.

Vermont outranks every other state in per capita value of dairy products and only three states surpass
